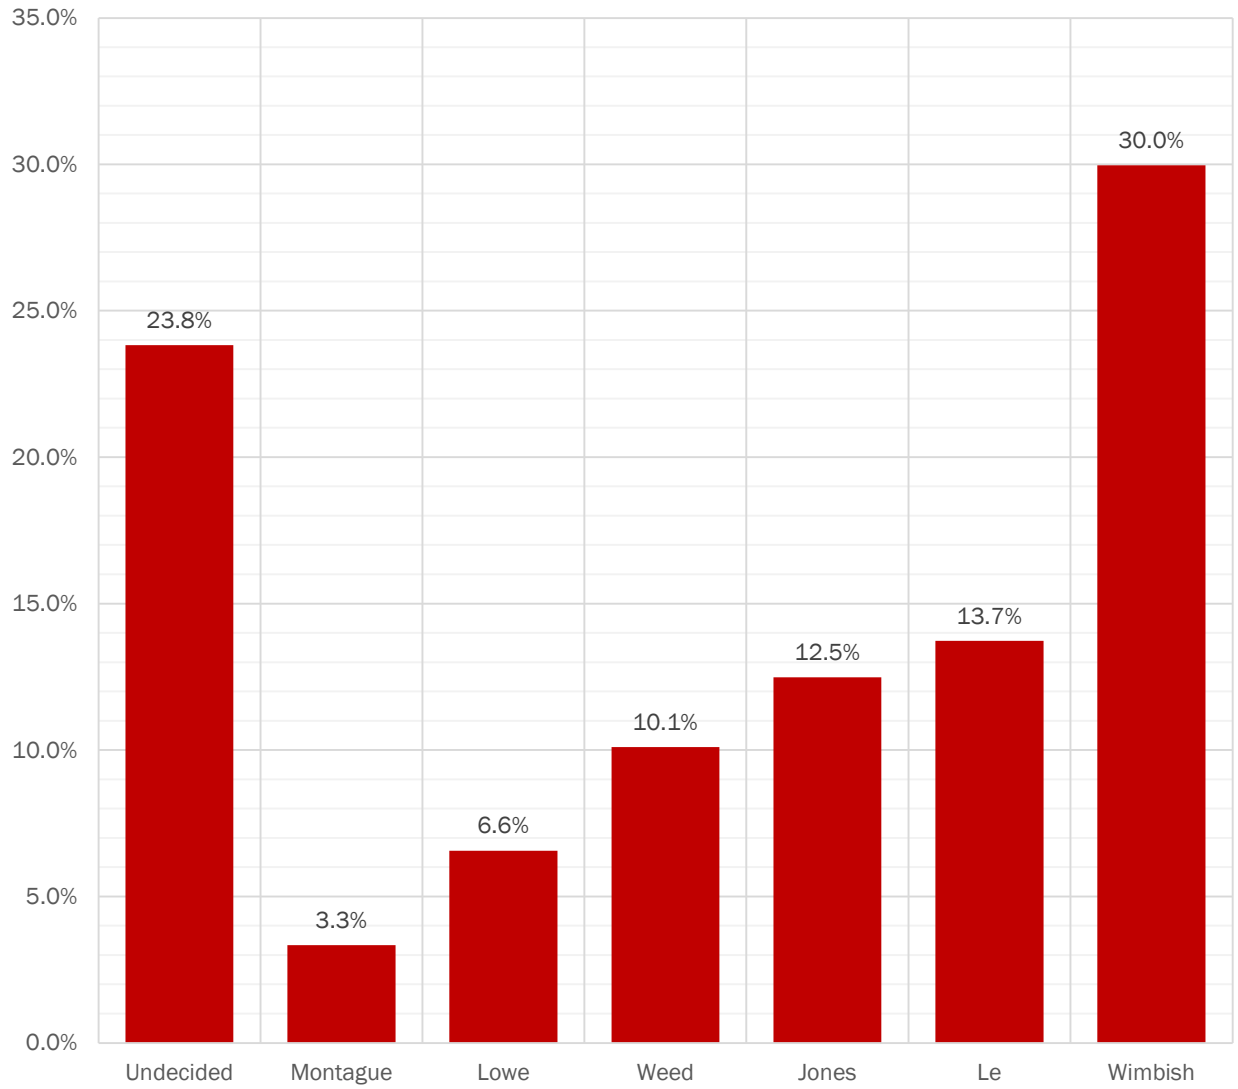
VICTORY INSIGHTS

(A) Executive Summary

We anticipate that Calvin Wimbish will win the Republican Primary for Florida's 10th Congressional District. He leads both early voters and Election Day voters, and he enjoys the highest favorability out of any candidate. Due to the small sample size of the poll, we cannot confidently project the finishing order of the remaining candidates, but our simulations give Wimbish a 99% chance of victory, even after taking into account the small sample size.

(B) Current Standings

Wimbish is far-and-away the leader of the pack. The remaining candidates mostly fall within each other's margin of error, indicating that their finishing order is unclear. Just under a quarter of the electorate has still not made up their minds about who they'll be voting for.



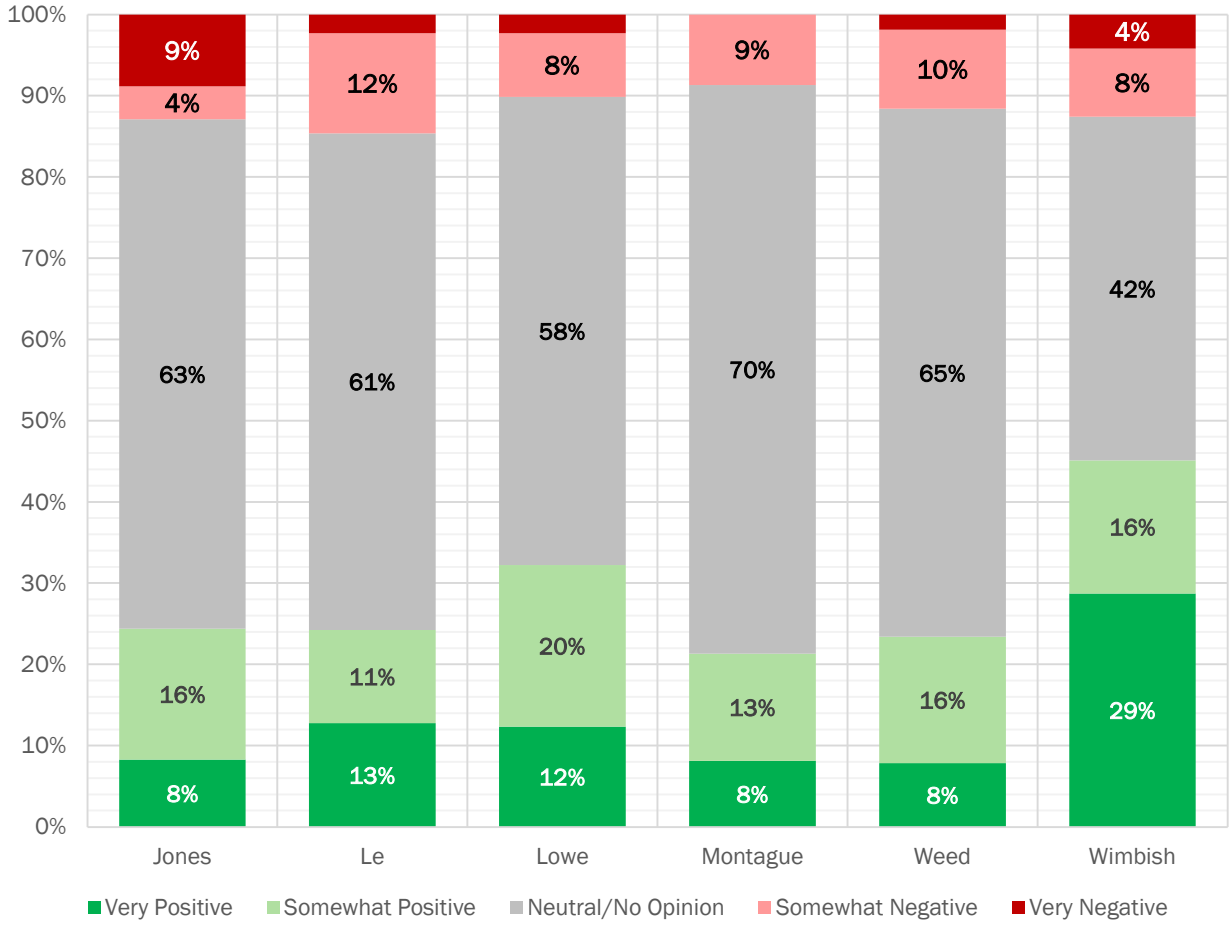
(C) Early vs. Election Day Voters

Wimbish decisively won both early and Election Day voters.

	Early Voters	Election Day Voters
1st Place	Wimbish	Wimbish
2nd Place	Jones	Weed
3rd Place	Le	Lowe
4th Place	Lowe	Montague
5th Place	Montague	Le
6th Place	Weed	Jones

(D) Candidate Favorability

Wimbish is clearly the best-known and most popular candidate in the race. With 45% favorability, he beats his closest competition by more than 10%. Additionally, he is the only candidate for which the majority of the electorate has an opinion.



(E) Simulation Results

Wimbish claimed the #1 spot in 99.3% of the 10,000 simulations we performed of the race. This is an overwhelmingly positive result for Wimbish, and we expect him to win this Tuesday.

	Wimbish	Le	Jones	Weed
Simulated Win Percentage	99.3%	0.4%	0.2%	0.1%
